INTRODUCTION

EVERY college has a character of its own. This is especially true of the older of the American colleges located east of the Appalachian Mountains.

To the alumni of these institutions the word college takes on its broadest import. It embraces not only the graduates, faculty, and students, the grounds and buildings, but as well the history, the traditions, the memories that cluster about them; these latter are cherished and venerated by the alumni as if they were ever mindful that "the things which are seen are temporal, but the things which are not seen are eternal."

It is this attitude of mind that generates that loyalty and love called college spirit. Bowdoin College is rich in the unseen things. They are woven into the warp and woof of all that she has been in the past, and of all that she is today.

Bowdoin's part in the war for the preservation of the Union is renowned not only because so many of her sons took part in it, but because some attained to so high rank and rendered such distinguished service that a history of that conflict would be incomplete without the mention of their names.

We recall to the lasting glory of our college that a Bowdoin man was in command on the first day at Gettysburg, and selected the position against which the flower of Southern Chivalry broke and receded, leaving it "the high water mark of the Confederacy"; that Howard's subsequent war record under Sherman and as Commander of the Army of the Tennessee confirmed him as one of the great general officers of the Union armies.

Grant crowned the brilliant career of another Bowdoin man known as "The Hero of Little Round Top" by designating him to receive the Confederate surrender at Appomattox. General Morris Schaff, in his "Sunset of the Confederacy," writes: "It was a fitting circumstance . . . that Chamberlain was selected and called on his famous corps to salute its intrepid enemy at this last solemn ceremonial, with the marching salute of honor. The courage of both armies, Lee's noble character, Grant's magnanimity, and Chamberlain's chivalry, have lighted the historic event up to a lofty, hallowed summit for all people." He adds: "What honor to his native state! And how he filled out Bowdoin history!"

It might have been inferred that New England had become effete in the many years of peace and prosperity that this section of the country had enjoyed since the Civil War, but the issue proved otherwise.

New England college men — noblesse oblige — were in the vanguard of those who sought to prepare themselves in advance for the war that seemed to them inevitable.

For more than two years they had followed the details of a conflict raging in Europe, that had no parallel in hardships and horrors, in wounded and dead, and yet they were undismayed.

From the Ivy Day poem, delivered in Memorial Hall in 1916, we may gather something of the intrepid spirit that pervaded the College at the time, in anticipation of a call to the colors; a willingness to face death in what was conceived to be a great moral issue — the overthrow of brute force in its attempt to dominate civilization.

Extolling the service of Bowdoin men in the Civil War to whose memory the hall was dedicated, the poem continues:

"This was their country and see how they loved her!
Will you be there when her banners are flown?
True they are gone but their spirit's eternal;
Will you be with them in fighting for freedom?
Will you be there when the bugles are blown?"

The answer to this challenge is found in the Class Day poem of 1917, delivered to a class for the most part in uniform, and reduced in numbers by those who had already entered the service.

"Commencements past have opened peaceful doors
To those young lives so eager to begin,
And showed the promise to far-reaching shores
Where peace was sweet and all the world to win!

INTRODUCTION

We lift our eyes to sacrificial wars
Where death is peace and weary ranks are thin,
Our road leads on to fields in flaming France."

Admiration for the loyalty, faith, and courage of the undergraduates prompted the undertaking of this volume.

It is dedicated to those who fell in France. To one who learns from their companions in arms something of the heroism with which these American-bred boys met death on the shell-torn battle fields of a strange and distant land, there must come a renewed sense of wonder, of awe and reverence, at the possibilities of the human soul.

It will have its value as an historical record, but it will have a greater value in its appeal to the generations of Bowdoin men yet to be.

Today the government of the United States is offering a treaty to the nations of the world to abolish war as a method of settling disputes.

So far as those of our boys who were at the front can ever be persuaded to refer to their experiences it is to decry war as a barbaric and brutal national institution; to express the hope that no such catastrophe will ever again befall civilization. Such is their denunciation of war; but may the vision of Bowdoin manhood, facing the possibility of making the last great sacrifice for the vindication of a great principle, never fade. May it survive as one of Bowdoin's most cherished memories.

Samuel A. Melcher, '77, Frederick E. Drake, '98, Philip W. Meserve, '11, Lawrence W. Smith, '13, and Boyd W. Bartlett, '17, were appointed by President Sills as a committee to assist the editor in determining the scope of this volume. It was considered advisable to confine it to a record of those who served in our army, navy, and marines, or those of our allies, and with relief organizations over seas.

To have secured anything approaching a complete record of the manifold and onerous duties and sacrifices made by Bowdoin men in civic activities to promote the successful issue of the war would have been impossible. Moreover, had the material been forthcoming, it would have necessitated a book of unwieldly proportions, and one far beyond our available resources. A partial record would have done an injustice.

The distinguished services of the Honorable William Moulton Ingraham, '95, Assistant Secretary of War; of George William Tillson, Sc.D., '77, one of the American engineers invited to confer with a French congress on the rehabilitation of the devastated regions; of Alfred E. Burton, Sc.D., '78, in the establishment of schools for training officers in the merchant marine; of the Honorable John A. Peters, '85, as a member of the congressional committee on Naval Affairs; of Harvey D. Gibson, '02, general manager of the Red Cross, at home and abroad; of Professor William E. Lunt, Ph.D., as ethnologist with the American delegation at the Peace Conference, Paris; of David R. Porter, '06, General Secretary of the National War Work Council of the Y. M. C. A.; of Professor Roscoe J. Ham of our faculty, special assistant to the American ambassador at Petrograd in the care of German prisoners, might be noted as marked instances of our civic contribution to the common cause.

It would have been a gratification to have made special mention of some of the brilliant deeds of heroism recorded in these pages, but where could the line be drawn? Suffice it to say, that as in the Civil War, so in the World War, her sons demonstrated that Bowdoin is the mother of men.

These records are compiled from answers to questionnaires, from class secretaries' reports, circulars issued by the college librarian in 1917 and 1919, class scrapbooks, catalogues, Bugles, Orients, and "Alpha Delta Phi in the World War."

This volume does not contain all of the records of Bowdoin men entitled to a place in it, but the failure is not due to a lack of effort to get them. In some cases there has been a neglect to furnish information for which repeated appeals were made; in others the questionnaires have been returned unsigned or unclaimed.

Many records are incomplete, but they contain all the information obtainable from their sources or that was deemed pertinent. To obviate errors an offer was made, before publication, to submit all records, in galley proof form, for corrections.

INTRODUCTION

It was anticipated that it would be possible to obtain any number of excellent pictures of the Bowdoin Reserve Officers' Training Corps and its successor, the Student Army Training Corps, in marching order or drawn up at review on the college grounds. It is greatly to be regretted that no such pictures could be found. Such as have been used are the best — in fact, the only ones — available.

In the preparation of this volume my thanks are due to President Sills, Professor Cram, Professor Mitchell; Mr. Wilder, the college librarian; Mr. MacCormick, the alumni secretary; and Henry Farr of the class of 1929, whose assistance has been of the very highest order.

BOWDOIN IN THE
WORLD WAR

THE GOVERNMENT AND THE COLLEGE

By PRESIDENT KENNETH C. M. SILLS, LL.D.

ON April 10, 1917, four days after the declaration of war, the Faculty issued an address to the students urging them to remain at the College until proper steps could be taken to institute a Reserve Officers Training Corps. Almost immediately, through the influential interest of Hon. William M. Ingraham, '95, Assistant Secretary of War, Captain Sherman A. White, of the regular army, was detailed to Bowdoin, and on April 23 the student battalion was organized; drilling and instruction in military science were under way. Preparatory work had been carried on in the winter months very largely through student initiative; the ground had been well prepared. Under the very competent direction of Captain White the military programme called for ten hours a day for five and a half days per week for those who were ready and able to work for commissions by going to summer camp, and ten hours a week for others eligible for military service.

On Thursday, May 3, the colors, voted by the legislature of the State of Maine to the student battalion, were presented on Whittier Field by the Hon. Percival P. Baxter, '98, afterward Governor of Maine, and accepted by President Hyde. As this was the last public appearance of the President, and his last speech, it is given in full:

Bowdoin College is proud and happy to receive these colors as the gift of Maine. For one hundred and fifteen years Bowdoin students have enjoyed study and leisure, work and play, under the protection of the nation and the state. Once only in all these years has the life of the country been seriously threatened. Then the young men of Bowdoin sprang to arms in her defense; who and how many is told on the eastern wall of our Memorial Hall. In the most critical battle of that four years' war Oliver O. Howard, an officer who had been a Bowdoin student, selected the favorable ground on which the victory was won; and Joshua L. Chamberlain, an officer who had been a Bowdoin student and a Bowdoin professor, held against repeated attacks the decisive position, and when the war was over, this same Bowdoin officer received the surrender of General Lee's army.

From science and art, from literature and history, from the track and diamond, these young men voluntarily and eagerly, in loyalty and duty are hurrying to the defense and support of their country.

In his old age the Greek poet Æschylus, writing his own epitaph, forgot to mention his immortal plays, but did mention the fact that forty years before he risked his life for his country at Marathon.

These young men forty years hence will forget much that we have taught them here; but they will not forget that their State placed the colors of their country, together with the college colors, in their hands; and they will bear themselves so that the State shall be proud and happy to remember that the trust committed to them was faithfully and honorably held.

The students worked faithfully and with real enthusiasm; and when the first selection of candidates for the Plattsburg camp showed that only twenty-five were chosen, there was great disappointment on the campus. Captain White proved himself not only a very capable officer, but a real leader, and he was ably assisted by a Faculty committee consisting of Professors Nixon and Bell, and Assistant Professor Langley. The two courses of training in Military Science, one intensive and the other general, were continued until Commencement. Many of the usual college activities were curtailed; and from April until June the student body was girding itself for service whenever called upon to give it. Dr. Whittier was the first member of the Faculty to receive a commission. By June 5 over one hundred students were in active service; and more than three hundred of our four hundred and thirty-four were enrolled in some branch of military or naval training. Many of the most promising students left every week. As President Hyde wrote, the College was sorry to see them go, but would have been more sorry if they were not willing and eager to go.

In the summer of 1917 the campus and buildings of the College were offered to the State of Maine as training quarters for the First Maine Heavy Artillery, popularly known as the Milliken Regiment. The offer was gratefully accepted, and to all intents and purposes Bowdoin College became for the summer, Camp Chamberlain, named after our soldier college president. It is fair to record that this action was taken very largely through the initiative of Professor George T. Files. An interesting incident was that, during the camp, every morning, mass was said by a Roman Catholic Chaplain in the College Chapel. The whole experience was a very happy one. The soldiers took excellent care of college property; there was little or no friction, and the College was glad indeed to have an opportunity to render this service to the State with which its relations had always been so cordial. By formal vote of the Governor and Council, the thanks of the State of Maine were extended "for this splendid example of patriotism."

In September, 1917, the government assigned Major John H. Duval, U. S. A., a retired army officer, to take the place of Captain White who had been ordered to France. The Reserve Officers Training Corps was continued with an enrollment of over two hundred and twenty; and in the winter months, especially, the Gymnasium and Hyde Athletic Building furnished unusual facilities. There was commendable interest in military work; and excellent foundations were laid particularly in close order drill. From time to time men were sent off to the Officers' Training Camp at Plattsburg. The College endeavored to coöperate with the government by preparing its students for the reserve officers' training camps as promptly as possible, and most of the Bowdoin candidates did well there. From November until April a naval training unit was maintained for men from the Naval Reserve, on leave of absence to finish their college studies. In January, 1918, a radio and buzzer school was organized by the Physics Department. Courses in Military Hygiene, Camp Sanitation, Military Topography, Military History, Surveying, and Navigation, were given by various members of the Faculty, and the College did not hesitate to adjust its usual curriculum to the war needs of the time. In general the academic year from September, 1917, to June, 1918, was a time of storm and stress, but on the whole there was less restlessness than might have been expected. In many ways the experience of the College was happier in the R. O. T. C. days than in the later S. A. T. C. period.

In the summer of 1918 frequent conferences took place between the officials of the College and representatives of the government, and final arrangements were made for the institution of the Student Army Training Corps at the opening of the college term, September 26. Freshmen were admitted upon meeting the regular requirements; and upper-classmen returned as usual. After October 1 the College was definitely under the War Department. When students were formally enrolled in the S. A. T. C. they became soldiers in the United States Army; they were uniformed and equipped at the expense of the government; they were subject to military discipline and received the pay of a private ($30 per month). In addition, room rent, board equivalent to army rations, and tuition were covered by the government. In turn all of the facilities of the College were placed at the disposal of the government; dormitories were used as barracks; and certain of the fraternity houses were set aside as mess halls.

The enrollment of the College on October 10, 1918, was 398, of whom 273 were in the S. A. T. C. These men were divided into six groups with registration as follows: I. Infantry and Artillery, 132; II. Aviation, 10; III. Quartermaster and Ordnance, 30; IV. Engineering, Signal Corps, and Chemical Warfare, 23; V. Pre-medical, 8; VI. Naval Section, 70. Eleven hours per week in military subjects, including drill, and forty-two hours per week of other work, — fourteen hours of lectures and recitations and twenty-eight hours of supervised study or laboratory exercises, — were required. Students under eighteen and those over eighteen not eligible for military service pursued the regular college courses. To facilitate matters, the college year was divided into three terms, — the first, to extend from October 1 to January 1. Lieutenant Colonel Duval was in command of the S. A. T. C., and he was assisted by several young officers, — college men from the South. The College had to make constant and quick changes to meet the necessarily experimental requirements of the government. Courses had to be made up almost overnight. The members of the teaching staff readily took up new tasks; for example, Professor Woodruff turned from teaching Homer and Æschylus to the prosaic duties of purchasing agent for the student battalion; Professor Elliott taught elementary French in addition to lecturing on English literature; and so it went all along the line.

The College, under the panoply of Mars, presented some unusual sights. Every morning, soon after reveille at day-break, the members of the student battalion were on the Delta, vigorously pursuing setting-up exercises. They were then marched at a brisk pace to breakfast in the three or four fraternity houses assigned for dining halls. At eight-twenty the whole corps proceeded to the Chapel where the usual morning service was held. Personally, I am firmly convinced that holding to the college chapel service did much for the morale of the student body in days when it was none too easy to hold to the integrity of tradition. After chapel the battalion broke up into squads to report at various recitation rooms and laboratories for classroom work. After dinner, at noon, there was a brief period of relaxation followed by military drill and athletics; and usually late in the afternoon the battalion assembled in front of Memorial Hall for retreat. There was another short time for recreation, followed by supper. In the evening the students were in their rooms for supervised study until ten, when taps was sounded and lights were out. There were occasional parades and "hikes"; a few holidays; frequent medical and other inspections. But the day as here described was one of drill, discipline, and routine. The S. A. T. C. had hardly been launched on its career when on November 11 the armistice was signed. The ringing of the chapel bell along with the other bells of the churches of Brunswick, very early in the morning, brought the welcome news. And few who were present will ever forget the chapel service that morning with the thrill that came to all that the war was over. In the afternoon a great mass meeting was held in the Hyde Athletic Building at which town and college united in celebrating the victory of those who fought for the freedom of the world.

After the signing of the armistice the government withdrew the S. A. T. C. units with all possible speed. And by Christmas it became an incident of the past. So far as Bowdoin was concerned the financial settlement made by the War Department was prompt and generous.

In conclusion it is perhaps hardly necessary to point out that from the opening of the War, April 6, 1917, until its close, November 11, 1918, the coöperation between the government and the College was in every way excellent. The government undoubtedly did all it could for Bowdoin, as for other colleges, by establishing the S. A. T. C., and in return the College placed everything it had at the disposal and direction of the War Department. But, as the official report of the College to the War Department, February 1, 1919, suggests, the attitude of the faculty toward the combination of military instruction and academic work was one of hearty coöperation in view of the emergency; apart from the emergency conditions, the opinion of the faculty was unanimous that it is not ordinarily practicable to combine military and academic instruction. The official report indicates that interest shown by students in their academic work was about half that shown in peace times, — probably too high an estimate, — and concludes that in case of a similar national emergency in the future, it will be better to give students intensive academic training in college for a period of at least three months before transfer to officers' training camps where not only all the life but all the instruction should be solely on military lines. For "proper conduct of military training demands a man's entire time; proper conduct of college work demands the same thing; and both the army and the college are to be esteemed more highly because such is the case." And this, too, is still the final word, although, in the stilted but true phraseology of the same report, it was found that, during the war, at Bowdoin "the relations between military and academic authorities were invariably harmonious and helpful."

THE COLLEGE IN WARTIME

By PROFESSOR MARSHALL P. CRAM, PH.D.

UNTIL the actual entry of the United States into the World War in April, 1917, the conflict in Europe had but little effect upon the College. A few lecturers had talked here, five or six students had spent a semester or so driving ambulances in France. Professor Ham had been in Russia looking after the welfare of German prisoners for the Red Cross, a few undergraduates had taken the course at Plattsburg in the summer vacation of 1916, the causes and progress of the war had been discussed at fraternity house dinner tables, — especially on Sunday nights when there were faculty visitors, — and that was about all. Through the fall and well into the winter of 1916-17, during which an enterprising newsboy used to be waiting on the chapel steps with papers after morning chapel, an observer walking behind students going away from chapel would be apt to notice that many had papers turned to the sporting page rather than to the news from Europe or Washington. Dean Sills, late in 1915, gave to his Freshman Latin class a list of questions designed to show how much they had been reading the newspapers, and received in reply an assortment of misinformation which ranged from the assertion that Bethmann-Hollweg was the ruling house of Austria, to the statement that "King Albert rules Greece." ("Would that he did!" was the Dean's comment to this last.)

Early in 1917 Carleton M. Pike and Loyall Sewall, who had returned from driving ambulances in France, gave a talk in the Union. As a result of this, money was raised from among the members and friends of the College to purchase two ambulances, which were given to the American Field Service in France and named the State of Maine Ambulances.

Not until Germany resumed her submarine policy early in 1917, with the threat that it brought to American rights, did the undergraduate body as a whole really awake to the seriousness of the situation. Once started, that interest grew remarkably fast, so that by the time the United States declared war in April, 1917, there was not an undergraduate who was not aroused.

Towards the last of February, 1917, largely at the instigation of Professor Nixon, a canvass was made of the undergraduate body to find out how many would enroll for a military course next fall, to last two years, and how many would enroll in a more intensive course for the spring and summer. Application was made to the War Department to detail an officer to the College for that purpose. This request, however, brought no immediate response, so during March, 1917, about one hundred undergraduates started drilling by themselves under the leadership of three men who had attended the Plattsburg camp the summer before.

The spring term started April 3, the morning of the day after President Wilson asked Congress to declare war. Within a few hours of the time the morning papers were received, men began to make preparation for leaving College and enlisting in the naval patrol fleet. The following day, April 4, President Hyde at morning chapel stated that while the College would favor the enlistment of a few men in such a naval patrol, — at most not more than three units of seven men each, — further enlistments would be discouraged because it would withdraw too many men who otherwise would be available for an officers' training corps later on. Practically every chapter house had been trying to get up a naval unit of seven men.

On April 18, an officer of the regular army, Captain Sherman A. White, arrived on orders from the War Department to give instruction in military training. Within a couple of days, arrangements were made for two courses, Military Science 1 and 2. Course 2 was for men nineteen years old, who, with their parents' consent, bound themselves to take intensive training for the rest of the college year, to go to a summer camp, and to accept a commission if they passed the examinations there. Such men had to be physically fit. The other course, Course 1, was open to other men with no obligation definitely undertaken for the future. This course required ten hours of work a week, all after 3.30 P.M. Men electing these courses were allowed to drop other college work, men in Course 2 dropping all other study, while Seniors and Juniors in Course 1 were required to carry four other courses and Sophomores and Freshmen three others. No required course, or one counting towards a major or minor, could be dropped. If a man's standing in a course to be dropped was C or better, no examination had to be taken, but an examination was required otherwise. About one hundred and thirty-seven men enrolled in Course 2 and fifty in Course 1.

By April 26, track had been given up, but baseball practice, at 6 A.M., was still continued. On May 3, colors, voted by the Legislature, were presented to the College. The presentation took place on Whittier Field, and was the last public appearance of President Hyde.

On May 9, the list of men admitted to the Officers' Training Camp at Plattsburg appeared. Of the sixty men recommended from the course here, only twenty-five or so were taken, and the selection provoked considerable criticism. Professors Bell and Van Cleve of the history department were both chosen.

Ivy Day, on June 1, was held as usual. The Masque and Gown gave "Master Pierre Patelin" and "The Lost Silk Hat" the night before, and Bowdoin defeated Bates at baseball in the forenoon. Every member of the team was a candidate for Plattsburg. Forty Juniors were present for the Ivy exercises.

Baccalaureate Sunday was June 17, and it rained hard all day. Professor Mitchell read the Baccalaureate sermon that President Hyde had written before he was taken ill. Thirty-two Seniors were present out of a class that had numbered eighty at the outbreak of the war. About a third of the parts given at the Alexander Prize Speaking, the following night, were connected with the war. Class Day and Commencement Day were carried on about as usual, but the attendance was small. The illness of President Hyde, whose death on June 29 came only a week later, cast considerable gloom over the week.

From July 29 to August 24, the college buildings were used by the Milliken Regiment of Heavy Artillery, a regiment organized under the national guard quota of the state. The three dormitories, Winthrop, Maine, and Appleton, and the Gymnasium were used for barracks; the old Union — which burned a few years later — was used for headquarters; the Psi Upsilon House, for the officers; and Adams Hall, for a hospital. The history lecture room at the east end of the ground floor was the large ward. Mess shacks constructed of rough boards and tarred paper were built on the Delta. The Y. M. C. A. had the south wing of the chapel, and the chaplain, a Roman Catholic, the north wing. Mass was held in the chapel every morning at 6:30 and on some Sundays. The whole area behind the gymnasium was used for airing bedding every pleasant day. The band practiced every morning under the Thorndike Oak, and a corps of buglers was trained in the woods just across the street from the Zeta Psi House. One of the neighbors likened them to a troop of giant mosquitoes just learning to sing.

Towards the close of their stay, moving pictures were shown in the evening, out of doors, on a screen hung outside the gymnasium just north of the main door. The regiment had a black goat for a mascot, which was tethered on the grass west of the south end of Maine Hall and moved around to eat a fresh place every day. He was the only one of the regiment allowed on the part of the campus west of the dormitories. No civilians were allowed on the path just under the dormitory windows on the west, nor east of that line.

With the opening of the College in September there came a change in the nature of the instruction given in military training. No intensive course, such as had been given the spring before, was attempted; the men from that had all gone to one of the Plattsburg camps during the summer. Captain White was over seas, and Major John H. Duval was here as Professor of Military Science and Tactics. By the first of October about one hundred men, out of the three hundred and forty-three in College, were enrolled in the course, which called for five hours a week for drill and instruction, and could be taken in place of the courses in physical training.

For practically all of the college year 1917-18, things in the College followed a rather uneventful course, — that is, uneventful in comparison with the spring before and the fall after. The coal shortage, which began in November and lasted throughout the winter, made considerable difficulty for the College as well as for the chapter houses. Only one or two houses had obtained a winter's supply of coal when the time came to start furnaces, and as the shortage became more serious the State Fuel Commission refused to allow the delivery of coal to houses which were occupied by only one fraternity. In January the Zeta Psi house was closed, and the Zetes lived with the Alpha Deltas until warm weather; later in the year the Kappa Sigmas united with the Betas in the latter's house. By the middle of the winter most of the chapter houses were burning green wood in the furnaces, and in some cases men were taking turns staying up through the night to keep the home fires burning, as the song of the time has it. Sophomore and even Junior standing did not save a man from the wood saw when the fires burned low. In January Winthrop Hall, in which only about a third of the rooms were occupied, was closed, and from February 5 to the opening of the spring term, chapel was held in Memorial Hall.

In April the faculty authorized the diversion of about twenty men to an intensive military course which would take every afternoon, so that these men could be prepared for the next officers' training camp. Upper classmen all through the winter and spring were dropping out of College singly and by twos and threes, to enter the army or navy. About the middle of May the War Department requested that as many men as possible in the Reserve Officers' Training Corps attend a junior camp at Plattsburg, which was to open June 3. Semester examinations, therefore, were advanced by about two weeks.

Ivy Day came on May 31, with forty-two Juniors present. Bates beat us at baseball, 6 to 3, in the morning, and after the Ivy exercises in the afternoon, a service flag, with 625 stars, was presented by the Portland alumni, which was hung from a pole over the front door of the chapel, where it stayed for the rest of the war. The stars numbered 1200 at the close. Seniors' Last Chapel was held as usual with only sixteen men there.

Commencement began on Sunday, June 16, with the Baccalaureate Service. Only thirteen Seniors were in line, just about one-seventh of the number that would have been there had it not been for the war. The inauguration of President Sills, with the delegates from the other colleges, which was combined with the Commencement exercises on Thursday, prevented the week from falling as flat as it otherwise would have.

During the summer, plans were perfected for the College to take over all the chapter houses from the associations that owned them, for the year 1918-19. This was done to prevent groups of men too few in number from starting in to try to run houses and thus roll up bills which after the war the alumni would, in all probability, have been asked to help pay. The College hired all the chapter houses outright for a rent equal to the cost to each alumni association of taxes, insurance, and interest on mortgages, for that particular house.

With the opening of the college year, September 26, 1918, the government inaugurated the new policy of establishing in all colleges the Students' Army Training Corps. In this, all physically fit students eighteen years old or over were to be enlisted as regular members of the United States Army. Members were to be under military discipline at all times, and to receive the pay of privates in the army — thirty dollars a month. The government was to provide uniforms, board, and rooms, which were to be furnished with necessities only. The colleges were asked to hold their entrance requirements at their usual level, — a request not always complied with, — and it was the intention of the War Department to withdraw men from time to time and send them to officers' training camps. The original plan called for drafted men to be sent to the colleges eventually, but the war ended too soon for this to be done. The idea was to use the colleges as preliminary schools in which to place men thought to be suitable material for officers' camps, for a short while first for preliminary training and testing.

The term opened with Lieutenant Colonel Duval, who had been here the year before, as commanding officer. He, however, suffered a severe physical breakdown a few days after the beginning of the term, which incapacitated him for the rest of the time, so that 1st Lieutenant William H. Wright was really the head. He was assisted by Professor William Hawley Davis as personnel officer. Professor Davis was a member of the faculty who had been at Plattsburg the preceding summer, and was assigned back here as second lieutenant in the fall. For subalterns, three young second lieutenants, who had been undergraduates at different Southern colleges the year before, were detailed here. Later a fourth second lieutenant, who had been a freshman at Bates the year before, was added. After term had been going a week or so, a naval unit was established, with Ensign Horace T. Greenwood in command. Two other ensigns were assigned to assist him. Towards the very end of the period, after the armistice, Captain Robert E. Campbell came here to take command over Lieutenant Wright.

The officers all lived together in the Theta Delta Chi House, the dining room of which served as one of the three military dining rooms, the other two being those of the Delta Kappa Epsilon and Psi Upsilon houses. The navy unit ate at the Beta Theta Pi House, and the Zeta Psi House was run by the College for those students not in either military unit. These were the men younger than eighteen or not physically fit. The College, except at the Zeta Psi House, used the rough board tables made for Commencement, covered with white oilcloth. An attempt was made to get enameled ware dishes, but as this proved impossible, the dishes belonging to the fraternities were used instead. All men roomed in the dormitories, the non-military group being in Hyde Hall, which had been finished the year before.

The College opened with three hundred and sixty-five men in attendance; of these, two hundred were in the military unit; seventy-seven in the naval unit; and eighty-eight in neither. The quota assigned by the War Department was three hundred and seventy-five. The original order sent out from the War Department called for dividing all men in the S. A. T. C., not in the Naval Unit, into the following five divisions: 1. Infantry, Artillery, and Coast Defence. 2. Aviation; 3. Ordnance and Quartermasters; 4. Engineering, Signaling, and Chemical Warfare; 5. Motor Transport and Truck. In the first division, in which all of our students fell, the following course of study was published at first: Military Instruction, 11 hours a week; War Issues, 9 hours; Military Law, 9 hours; Sanitation and Hygiene, 9 hours; Surveying and Map Making, 12 hours; unassigned, 3 hours. This list was soon enlarged and regular college courses took the place of many of the subjects first listed. Military instruction and war issues were about the only subjects rigidly held. Reveille at first came at 6:40 A.M., with an hour of drill before chapel at 9:30. Two hours in the evening were set apart for study, which men did for the most part in their dormitory rooms unless they had permission to work for that time in the library or chemistry laboratory. Taps sounded at 10 P.M. The hours of this schedule were altered somewhat as the term progressed, especially as the days grew shorter and the period of daylight saving came to a close, but for the whole of the period the student body rose earlier and went to bed earlier than it has been known to do before or since. Students were obliged to keep their rooms and the halls of the dormitories clean, and even to rake up the leaves outside, and one fine day late in October a sight was seen which has never been seen before or since, — all the bedding from the dormitories hanging on clotheslines for an airing in the sun.

Early in October the famous epidemic of influenza began. For a group of that size, Bowdoin had very few cases, but strict quarantine regulations had to be established, and men were confined to the campus. Military inspection in the morning undoubtedly did much to bring to light incipient cases and to get them into the Infirmary before more people were exposed. Chapel and some of the larger classes were given up for a short time.

Football was played during the fall, but with much lessened intensity and interest. The fraternities pledged Freshmen in the usual way during the few days at the beginning of the fall before the S. A. T. C. was formally established. Later on, about the middle of October in most cases, initiations were held. The authorities of the College did everything possible to assist the fraternities in obtaining delegations and furthering initiations, in order that the entering class might have fraternity connections when the war should be over, even though it was recognized that for the present fraternity life could not amount to much. The fraternities were allowed the use of the common rooms of their houses on Saturdays and Sundays, but were prohibited from building furnace fires in the houses in which the dining rooms were not used, in order to prevent wasting coal. The houses closed were the Delta Upsilon, Kappa Sigma, and Sigma Nu. The old house of Alpha Delta Phi was closed for a while, but from the first of November it was occupied by the man hired by the College to run a lunch counter in the Union. By the beginning of November, changes from the normal appearance of things quite justified a Freshman in writing an editorial for the Orient — not published, however — for saying anent the war preparation of the College, referred to as alma mater, "She is now stripped for the struggle."

Then came the armistice on that well-remembered November 11, 1918, and by the end of the December term all the men in the S. A. T. C. were demobilized. In January the winter term started. Many courses were begun over again for men coming into College from the army or navy, and for this year the curriculum was based upon a calendar of three terms rather than one of two semesters. The College continued to hold the chapter houses and to operate the five dining rooms for the winter term. Each of the five fraternities whose house was run, was required to invite one of the five fraternities whose house was closed, to share its dining room, an arrangement which served the purpose of keeping the fraternities from running into debt through trying to operate a house with too few men, but which was satisfactory to hardly anybody. By the end of the winter term a large part of the College was eating outside, and the fraternity house dining rooms were being run at a loss by the College. The experience should be recalled if the idea of a college commons ever comes up at some time in the future. With the opening of the spring term, each house was turned back to its owners, and with that the condition of the College came back to normal once more.

GEORGE TAYLOR FILES, '89

GEORGE TAYLOR FILES was born in Portland, Maine, September 23, 1866. He fitted for college at Portland High School, and in 1889 was graduated from Bowdoin with high honors. In 1893 he received the degree of Ph.D. from the University of Leipsic in Germany. In 1894 he became Professor of the Germanic Languages at Bowdoin, a chair which he held until his death on April 23, 1919. In January, 1918, Professor Files was granted a six months' leave of absence from Bowdoin College to engage in Y. M. C. A. work in France, where he took charge of one of the large Y. M. C. A. army bases with the French forces. He went over seas in February and did not return to this country until December, his leave having been extended. There is no question but that his health was greatly impaired by his work over seas. When he left Brunswick he made light of the dangers and hardships he was likely to incur; but to a man of his temperament and rather delicate health it was indeed a hazardous task. His death, that was due without doubt to the hard strain of his work for the Y. M. C. A. in France, has been called "hardly less unselfish and heroic than if he had died in battle."

SHERMAN AVERY WHITE, hon. A.M.

SHERMAN AVERY WHITE was born at Forestville, New York, November 30, 1876. He attended the Horace Mann School in New York City, then went to the University of Nebraska, where he received his A.B. degree in 1898. He served with the Volunteers in the Spanish-American War, enlisting as a private in Company E, 1st Nebraska Infantry, and serving as private, Quartermaster Sergeant, and Sergeant Major from May 10 until September 15, 1898. He was promoted to 2d Lieutenant September 16, 1st Lieutenant August 1, 1899, and was honorably mustered out August 23, 1899. Two years later he became an officer in the regular army, serving as 2d Lieutenant from February 2, 1901, as 1st Lieutenant from April 7, 1904, and as Captain from September 18, 1914. He was connected with the 12th and the 23d Infantry. In 1916 he appears in the Army Register as a distinguished graduate, Army School of the Line. In the spring of 1917 Captain White was assigned to Bowdoin College as Professor of Military Science and Tactics, and, in the words of President Hyde: "He at once won the devotion of the students, and within three days of his arrival military instruction and military drill were well under way." In the brief time that he was at Bowdoin, about three months in all, he so commended himself that on Commencement Day, 1917, he was granted the honorary degree of Master of Arts. As he himself wrote:

"Usually like most men I value a thing in proportion to the effort required to get it. In this case the unexpected honor of a degree is a wholly un hoped-for reward beyond my desserts. I wish I might proudly say that it was a regular degree wrenched from the college by my brilliant study and work; but I am the more grateful."

In the summer of 1917 he was sent to the 30th Infantry at Syracuse, New York, and promoted temporary Major and Lieutenant-Colonel and ordered over seas. He saw action in France with the 51st Infantry. He was killed in an accident in France, November 4, 1918.

Captain White was a splendid officer and a fine man.

ROBERT LORD HULL, '97

The records of the War Department show that "a special contract for service as Contract Surgeon, U. S. Army, was made on November 26, 1917, with Dr. Robert L. Hull, of Oklahoma City, Oklahoma, and that the contract was annulled March 16, 1918; accepted appointment as Major, Medical Reserve Corps, May 7, 1918; assigned to active duty June 3, 1918; reported June 11, 1918, at General Hospital, Presidio of San Francisco, California, and died January 4, 1919, of a disease in line of duty at Letterman General Hospital, Presidio of San Francisco, California."

This is a simple statement, but those of us who knew Bob Hull know that it is a record of duty well performed. In college he was a quiet, unassuming fellow, thorough and proficient in everything that he undertook, a leading scholar, and one of the best baseball players that ever wore a Bowdoin uniform. He played on the Varsity Team during all of his course; as Captain during the season of 1896. This was the first time in several years that a Bowdoin team won the State Championship.

His friends in college knew that he intended to study medicine, for he was devoted to the profession and his courses were of a pre-medical nature. He taught for a short time after leaving college, then entered the Jefferson Medical College in Philadelphia, and after graduation began general practice in Portland. He was remarkably successful as a young physician, but soon realized that he would be more contented with a specialty, and chose orthopedic surgery. He gave up his practice in Portland, went to New York and studied orthopedics thoroughly, after which he entered practice in Oklahoma City. He was the pioneer orthopedic surgeon in the Southwest, and he fully realized his responsibility in establishing his specialty there.

Other members of this class were in the service, two of whom were in France, but Bob was its sacrifice. He would have desired no eulogy from any one, and those who knew him best know that eulogy is unnecessary.

WARREN EASTMAN ROBINSON, '10

WARREN EASTMAN ROBINSON died on November 6, 1918, of wounds received in action about November 5. He was 1st Lieutenant of Company C, 102d Machine Gun Battalion, of the 26th Division.

In 1910, Lieutenant Robinson became a member of Troop C, Massachusetts Cavalry. He served on the Mexican border during the summer of 1916, winning his commission as 2d Lieutenant in that period. The Massachusetts Cavalry was later converted into a machine gun battalion, and as such went across to France in September, 1917.

After some weeks of training the company went into the line about the first of February. In the early summer Lieutenant Robinson attended a school of instruction for officers, and his promotion to the rank of 1st Lieutenant soon followed. After the second battle of the Marne, in which he had been engaged at Château-Thierry, he was cited in orders for marked gallantry. His last letter, written November 3d, reported heavy fighting, which was later identified as that east of the Meuse.

Warren Eastman Robinson came from a prominent Bowdoin family. His father, Walter A. Robinson, of Arlington, Massachusetts, was a graduate of the college. Warren E. Robinson was born on May 7, 1890, and attended the schools of Arlington. At Bowdoin he was a member of the Alpha Delta Phi fraternity, was elected to Phi Beta Kappa, and was active in track athletics, the Orient, and other undergraduate affairs. After his graduation in 1910, he studied science and mathematics at Harvard University, receiving the degree of A.M., and taught in the High schools at Watertown and Quincy, and for some years in the Boston Latin School.

In 1914, Lieutenant Robinson married Anne Louise, daughter of the late Professor Henry Johnson and Mrs. Johnson.

No one who knew Lieutenant Robinson in civilian life could doubt that he would make an able and devoted officer. His thorough manliness, his wholesomeness, of body, mind, and spirit, his splendid vigor and alertness, and his steadiness under great responsibilities, were qualities that marked him out for leadership. He had a clear, well-poised mind and a wide range of interests, but his bent was toward a life of action. It was this temperament that made him so successful in dealing with boys. Like all his father's people, he told a story capitally, and he had the keenest relish of absurdities. There was about him a certain merriness of heart, a youthful zest in the give and take of comradeship. These were the engaging surface traits of a character grounded upon loyalty, unassuming strength, unusual capacity for deep affection, and a highly spiritual religious faith. The sacrifice was never made more generously, with a clearer vision of its precious elements, or a better understanding of the magnificence of the cause.

HAROLD SUMNER SMALL, n '10

HAROLD SUMNER SMALL was born March 10, 1888, at Richmond, Maine. He was the son of Augustus E. and Ida (Norton) Small of Richmond. His mother was a native of Lewiston, so that both sides of his family were of Maine stock. His youth was spent in the town of Richmond; later he moved to York Village, and then to Boston. As a young boy he went to school at Groton, Massachusetts. He entered Bowdoin in the class of 1910, and remained for one year; he then took a course in finance at the University of Pennsylvania.

On April 10, 1911, he married Viola Crouch, and on January 24, 1912, a son, Harold Sumner Small, Jr., was born.

He adopted investment securities as his business and went to work first with Lawrence, Barnhum and Co.; later he was with Maynard S. Bird and Co., and then with Hayden, Stone and Co., leaving the latter firm to go into business for himself. In 1915 he helped organize Beyer and Small, of which he was an officer, and one-third owner. When this country went to war, his career in the bond business was just unfolding and showed great promise for the future. He was known throughout the state of Maine and in financial circles elsewhere. Strong, vigorous, and wonderfully attractive, he made friends everywhere.

With all the young and able-bodied men of Beyer and Small, he entered the service, joining the organization known as the First Maine Heavy Field Artillery. This regiment reported at Brunswick on July 26, 1917, moved from Brunswick to Westfield, Massachusetts, and thence to Camp Greene, North Carolina. Here Small was taken with pneumonia, and after an heroic struggle with this disease, died on December 3, 1917.

Harold Sumner Small had been a conspicuous soldier from the day he put on his uniform. Well over six feet tall, intelligent, and enthusiastic, he had risen in less than six months from private to Battalion Sergeant Major. At the funeral services held at Camp Greene, the entire regiment, officers and men, attended in formation, and marched as a guard of honor to the train, paying him full military honors. He was buried in Evergreen Cemetery, near Portland, Maine.

ROLAND HIRAM WAITT, '12

ROLAND HIRAM WAITT, son of Captain Hiram and Louisa (Palmer) Waitt, was born in Gardiner, Maine, July 6, 1886. He was a half brother of William Gay Waitt, Bowdoin, 1876.

His father died when he was two years of age, and his mother when he was five. He soon afterwards came into the family of Mr. and Mrs. James P. Moore of Gardiner and was tenderly cared for and brought up as one of their children. He was graduated from Gardiner High in 1906, ranking well in his class. While in the high school he took an active part in athletics, playing guard on the football team and was pitcher on the baseball team.

He entered Bowdoin in 1908, and was graduated in the class of 1912. He was a member of the Kappa Sigma Fraternity.

After graduating from college he entered the insurance business in New York City, and remained there until the failure of his health compelled him to retire in 1914.

In 1916 he went to Berlin, New Hampshire, in the employ of the International Paper Company and remained there until September, 1917. He entered service in the World War as a private in the 303d Heavy Field Artillery stationed at Camp Devens. At Camp Devens he stood the highest physiological test in his battery.

In the early winter of 1917-18 he was transferred to the 20th Field Artillery, stationed at Waco, Texas. He arrived in France in June, 1918, and was assigned to a regular army unit.

He died of wounds received in action, September 7, 1918, and was buried at Millery, Moselle, France. In April, 1922, his body was sent to America and lies in the Waitt family tomb, in Oak Grove Cemetery, at Gardiner, Maine.

Young Waitt was of a lovable disposition and was always very popular with his schoolmates and citizens generally who knew him. He was rather above the average height, of sandy complexion, always genial and hearty, and especially prompt and bright in repartee. He was somewhat retiring, but always ready to take his stand on any matter that came up, and he always took the right stand as he understood it. Undoubtedly he fought to save the world for democracy with that same spirit, and when he fell, fell with his face to the foe.

CHARLES ROY BULL, '13

CHARLES ROY BULL was born at Oakland, California, August 7, 1891. He later lived at Monticello, Maine, which was his residence at the time he entered Bowdoin. He prepared for college at Worcester Academy, and entered Bowdoin in the class of 1913, becoming a member of Alpha Delta Phi Fraternity. At college Bull was a member of the T. N. E. Society, Masque and Gown, Bugle Board, toastmaster Freshman Banquet, Freshman football team, and second football team in his Junior year.

After his graduation from Bowdoin in 1913 Bull took up the study of law at George Washington University, receiving the degree of LL.B. from that institution in 1916. He began the practice of law in New York City, where he remained until the entry of the United States into the World War. He attended the First Officers' Training Camp at Plattsburg, New York, in 1917, refusing a commission in the Quartermaster Corps. He was with the Bureau of War Risk Insurance at Washington until the spring of 1918, when he was called to Camp Upton, New York, as a private. Bull was promoted to Sergeant and sent to the Officers' Training School at Camp Lee, Virginia. While at Camp Lee he was stricken with influenza, from which he died on October 11, 1918.

"Johnny," as he was called by those who knew him, was of that quiet and unassuming type that always keeps in the background and whose abilities are not entirely apparent to the superficial observer. He had a deep and abiding hatred of sham and hypocrisy. Possessed of a strong intellect and keen analytic powers, he delighted in friendly argument. Smiling and jovial ever, he had a keen sense of humor which characterized his conversation. Like many true Bowdoin sons, feeling the call of service, he forsook his preferred career, shunned the easy to choose the more difficult course, only to be stricken down before his time. Of such is the Bowdoin which we cherish.

FREDERICK TREVENEN EDWARDS, n '13

FREDERICK TREVENEN EDWARDS was the son of the Reverend Frederick and Emma Louisa (Ridgway) Edwards, and was born in Cambridge, Massachusetts, July 11, 1892.

He attended the public schools of Malden and Bridgewater, Massachusetts. In 1905 the family moved to Milwaukee, where his father became rector of St. James's Church. The boy graduated from Milwaukee Academy in 1909, winning the Markham Gold Medal for oratory.

He entered Bowdoin College in the fall of 1909 and was always deeply interested and devoted to Bowdoin.

In 1915 he graduated from the Arts Course, Columbia University, New York. In the fall of that year he entered the New York Theological Seminary, passing some of his examinations for the Diaconate before entering the army.

He was passionately concerned with the war from its outbreak in 1914 and was only restrained from entering the French or British service by the counsel of his father. When war was declared in 1917 he immediately left the Seminary, went to Detroit, enlisted, and was at once ordered to the Officers' Training Camp, at Fort Sheridan, Illinois. There he entered the artillery arm of the service. In August he was commissioned provisional 2d Lieutenant in the Regular Army, and assigned to the 18th Field Artillery, Fort Bliss, El Paso, Texas. Here the regiment was trained until April, 1918, when it was transferred to Camp Merritt, Tenafly, New York.

Early in May the regiment was ordered over seas. On reaching France, Lieutenant Edwards was ordered to a French artillery school for intensive training and was stationed there until early in July. During this period he was appointed Battalion Adjutant and later Regimental Gas Officer, attached to the regimental headquarters staff. He was then sent to the gas school at general headquarters for a week's special training. On July 19 he joined his regiment at Viffort, below Château-Thierry. This regiment was heavily engaged in the Second Battle of the Marne without respite until it reached Fismes on August 3, at which time it was sent into rest billets.

Soon the regiment was on the move; this time to St. Mihiel, where it was in action until the salient was wiped out. At this time Edwards was commissioned 1st Lieutenant and Regimental Adjutant. He wrote regularly and fully, making no complaint, but it was a story of continual hardship in rain, cold, and mud, when he did not have his clothes off for weeks at a time.

Finally his regiment reached a new position and went into action again. His last letters contain an account of the fearful fighting; the last one was written on the battlefield, on October 5, the day he was mortally wounded. It was quite cheerful and hopeful over the speedy ending of the war.

On Tuesday, November 5, 1918, a letter arrived from his nurse telling of his death.

Colonel Albert S. Fuger wrote of him:

"Your son was very popular in the regiment and had a brilliant future ahead of him, and at the time of his death was personnel adjutant of his regiment. I had him promoted to First, and if he had lived he would have been a Captain in a short while, as he was performing a captain's duty, and very efficiently, too."

An excerpt from Lieutenant-Colonel Harrison's letter reads:

"I cannot speak too well of him. He was without exception the most popular man in the regiment, respected and loved by all officers and men alike. And with it all, he was a most excellent officer. It has never been my pleasure to have a more willing, loyal, or conscientious officer under me or over me."

Lieutenant Guy Bolte paid this tribute:

"He was a dear, lovable lad, and probably the liveliest officer we had in the regiment, with a constant flow of humor which cheered up everyone with whom he came in contact, especially during the terrible days of the Argonne."

BOWDOIN IN THE WORLD WAR

Lieutenant Edwards was a great lover of poetry. He had been a member of Brander Matthews' poetry class in Columbia University. At the time of his graduation, he had written a war poem, "First and Last," which was printed in the Class Program. Another war poem entitled "Today" was later published.

OMAR PERLIE BADGER, '14

Born at Harmony, Maine, October 5, 1888, son of George N. and Mary (Church) Badger. A graduate of Skowhegan High School in the class of 1910, Badger entered Bowdoin College in the class of 1914. He mapped his course at Bowdoin with the idea of a medical course after graduation, his ambition in the end to become a surgeon.

He began his medical course at Harvard in 1914. On account of the World War and the crying need for men with medical knowledge, his class was graduated in February, 1918. Previous to the completion of his course Badger had volunteered for service, joining the Medical Reserve Corps in 1917. Permission was given him to finish his course at Harvard and he was assigned to a year's duty in the Boston City Hospital, after which he was slated for over seas duty beginning February, 1919.

As the people of this country have since realized, our real foe in this struggle was the "Influenza," which raged here in our camps. During this epidemic, being in constant contact with the boys who were stricken, he became a victim himself, and passed away in the Boston City Hospital September 25, 1918. His superior officer at the hospital reported: —

"Especially do I want to express my admiration for his standards and his conscientiousness. I feel that his life has been no less gloriously given to his country than the offering of it he intended in joining the army."

To his classmates in college he was known as a "plugger," a "willing worker" and a "hard worker," ever enthusiastic about his work. One of his own expressions aptly expresses our opinion of him: "He was one of the best fellows I ever met."

He was a member of the Zeta Psi Fraternity.

LEONARD HENRY GIBSON, '14

LEONARD HENRY GIBSON was born at Bath, Maine, September 11, 1893. He was the son of Leonard Henry and Alice (Rideout) Gibson. He fitted for college at the Morse High School and entered Bowdoin with the class of 1914.

September 27, 1918, he died of pneumonia at Camp Devens, where he had been in the service with the rank of corporal. He had been selected to be transferred on October 15 to a Southern Training Camp for Commissioned Officers.

It was a strange irony of fate that rejected him for physical disability from one branch of the service after another, when he sought to get into the National Service, but that allowed him to be finally drafted and to pass the physical examinations only to die of disease in a training camp.

A classmate has written the following appreciation of him:

"Leonard Gibson was of all the men whom I knew intimately at Bowdoin the one with the finest possibilities of mental distinction. He was younger than most of the men in our class, and yet he possessed already many of the attitudes and convictions that the rest of us have been thinking our way into for fifteen years. By Freshman year his choice of a life-work had been made. Had he lived to take up that life-work — the teaching of English literature — he would have brought to it qualities which, I believe, would have made him an outstanding figure among teachers of his generation. He had a keen appetite both for learning and for life. Fastidious and sensitive, aristocratic in his personal tastes, he nevertheless was essentially social-minded. It never took people long to learn to like him; people of discernment liked him instantly. Older people recognized in his appearance a distinction which boys of his own age did not always see. He was intolerant of sham and stupidity, of hypocrisy, of the misuse of abilities for the purpose of self-seeking. He hated dogmatism and narrowness; he hated, in the profession for which he prepared himself, preoccupation with motes of dust in the name of scholarship. But he hated, even more intensely, superficiality, empty glibness, and messy emotionalism, perhaps because he was so free from any of those things himself. His mind had a cutting edge. Rarest of all his qualities, however, was his humor. This was a many-sided quality, ranging from a talent for elaborate joking — a possession not unusual in youths who unite high gifts with quickness of the blood — to an ability to play with ideas which I have not seen equaled in one of his age.

"I think of him first of all, I suppose, in connection with the life that centers about books when books themselves are regarded as living things, but I think of him nearly as often in connection with music and the theatre, New Meadows Inn and city restaurants, idleness and badinage and play. Living, as Leonard Gibson exemplified it, meant participation in many activities with every faculty."

EDWARD ALFRED TROTTIER, n '14

EDWARD ALFRED TROTTIER, was born August 4, 1890, in the town of Newmarket, New Hampshire. His parents were Henry and Mary (Bean) Trottier. He attended the Newmarket High School, Kimball Union Academy, and Dartmouth College, 1910-11; and Bowdoin College, 1911-13. He left college to become a traveling salesman, in which work he was engaged until 1916, when he became a wool broker in Boston. He gave up the wool business on July 24, 1918, to enroll in the United States Naval Reserve Force at the Navy Recruiting Station, Boston, Massachusetts. He reported for active duty on August 27 of that year at the Naval Training Camp, Hingham, Massachusetts, and rendered honorable and faithful service there as an apprentice seaman until his death on September 23, 1918, from influenza.

Edward Alfred Trottier was best known to his fellow students and fraternity brothers as "Al." Outside his studies, which always came first (although he was not a "grind"), his chief interest was golf. He may be said to have been one of Bowdoin's pioneer golfers, so recent is the development of this sport at Bowdoin.

"Al" was companionable and good-natured, yet a rather quiet and serious youth. One would not expect other than to find "Al" Trottier's name among the men of Bowdoin who answered the call of their country.

"Al" Trottier did more than answer his country's call; he made the supreme sacrifice, and so has become one of Bowdoin's Immortal Sons.

DOUGLAS URQUHART, n '14

DOUGLAS URQUHART was born October 9, 1890, at Ashfield, Massachusetts. He fitted for college at Sanderson Academy in that town and at Wesleyan Academy at Wilbraham, Massachusetts. He entered Amherst College in the fall of 1909, where he was initiated into the Alpha Delta Phi Fraternity. In the fall of 1910 he transferred to Bowdoin, where he remained one year. He then entered the employment of the American Writing Paper Company at Holyoke, Massachusetts.

In 1916 he enlisted as a private in Co. D, 2d Massachusetts Infantry, and served in New Mexico throughout the border troubles of that year.

When the call came for the World War he rejoined his company, now designated as Co. D, 104th Infantry, 26th Division. He was stationed first at Springfield and then at Camp Bartlett, Massachusetts. October 6, 1917, he sailed over seas. Soon after reaching France he was promoted to Corporal; in the spring of 1918 to Sergeant. He was scheduled for a commission at the time of his last engagement.

In France he was located in the Toul Sector. From February 6 to March 18, 1918, he was in the Chemin-des-Dames Sector. In July he was near Château-Thierry.

July 22 he was wounded in the Second Battle of the Marne; was captured and held by the Germans four days; was retaken by the French, and died July 29, 1918, in American Evacuation Hospital No. 4.

In March, 1918, Sergeant Urquhart wrote, "This life is full of hard work, but I don't mind; I am always glad I can stand it if the next man can."

"Doug" Urquhart was a boy of intrepid and manly spirit, sensitive to injustice, quick to defend a righteous cause. His marked personal attractiveness made him prominent in social affairs. He was popular with people of all ages. Those who knew him best speak particularly of his persistence, his independence of mind, his loyalty, conscientiousness, and integrity.

His body lies in a beautiful cemetery at Château-Perrensey,

CHARLES WILLIAM WALLACE FIELD, n '15

Born in Windham, Maine, June 25, 1892, son of William W. and Emily (Lamb) Field.

Attended the town schools, graduating from Windham High School, class of 1908. Graduated from North Yarmouth Academy, class of 1909.

He entered Bowdoin College, class of 1915; was initiated into Theta Delta Chi Fraternity. He remained at Bowdoin only one year. In 1912 he went to Boston, entering the city ticket office of the Boston and Maine, and New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroads. Before the War broke out, he became city passenger agent for the Central Vermont and Grand Trunk Railroads.

He enlisted in April, 1917, and attended the first Plattsburg Training Camp, opening May 14, 1917. Was graduated and commissioned 2d Lieutenant, Cavalry, August 14, 1917. Went to Camp Devens, Ayer, Massachusetts, August 29. Ordered to Camp Bartlett, Westfield, and reported for duty, 26th Division, September 1. Went to Brigade Headquarters as Aide to General Cole. He was assigned to the 103d Machine Gun Battalion, 52d Brigade, 26th Division, and went over seas. Embarked from Hoboken, New Jersey, on Cedric, October 3, 1917, arriving in Liverpool, October 17; thence to Southampton, to Le Havre, to Liffol-le-Grande (Training Area), October 30, 1917. He remained with the 103d until his death. In the spring of 1918 his name was listed for promotion. He was in the Chemin-des-Dames and Toul sectors, at Gondrecourt Offensive and Bois de Belleau, and took part in the Aisne-Marne Offensive.

On the morning of July 18, 1918, at Château-Thierry, Lieutenant Field, as commander of the second Platoon, Company A, 103d Machine Gun Battalion, went "over the top" with his men, supporting Company E, and the extreme left of the 2d Battalion, 103d U. S. Infantry. The attack advanced under machine-gun fire to its objective, the railroad embankment, about 400 yards north of Bois de Belleau. Lieutenant Field, on reaching his objective, had just set about the placing of his guns to protect the flank of the battalion when he fell mortally wounded by what appeared to be a sniper's bullet. He died immediately.

His body was brought to America and buried with military honors under the auspices of Clifford Smith Post, American Legion; and Presumpscott Lodge, F. and A. M., of which he was a member, performed the burial rites of the order. Burial was in the family lot in Smith Cemetery, Windham.

He early responded to the call of war, ready and willing to give his life for his country. The report of regimental commander and brigade commander regarding his conduct and devotion to duty in the field recorded him as a brave and gallant officer.

A comrade remarked of him, "that there was not a braver officer in the U. S. Army; adored by his men, and dearly loved by his brother officers."

His captain paid this tribute: "A God-fearing, brave, conscientious officer, one to whom men and officers looked with implicit faith and confidence. A true friend and comrade, loved by all."

STEWART PINGREE MORRILL, n '15

STEWART PINGREE MORRILL was born October 3, 1892, at Portland, Maine. He prepared for college at the South Portland High School and entered Bowdoin in the class of 1915. Here he stayed a little over two years. As a member of the Bowdoin Club he did a great deal to promote its prosperity.

At the time he entered the service he was a trusted employee of the American Express Company in Portland. He was first stationed at Fort McKinley with the 11th Company, C. A., N. G., afterwards designated as the 26th Company, C. A. C. He was subsequently with several others ordered to the Officers' Training Camp at Fort Oglethorpe, Chickamauga Park, Georgia, to qualify for a commission.

BOWDOIN IN THE WORLD WAR

While in training at Fort Oglethorpe he died on the 27th day of January, 1918, of meningitis.

Stewart Morrill was a musician of marked ability, and his services on public occasions were much in demand. He was kindly to everyone and in turn had hosts of friends.

He was buried with military honors in Mount Pleasant Cemetery, Portland. The casket, draped with the American flag, was borne on a caisson drawn by four horses. The Reverend Harry Townsend of Westbrook and Chaplain J. K. Smith of Fort McKinley conducted the services in the Universalist Church. The church was filled to capacity, while hundreds unable to gain admission stood around the edifice as the religious and military services were being carried out. There could have been no finer tribute as evidencing the high esteem in which young Morrill was held by his schoolmates, friends, residents of the city, and comrades in arms.

The South Portland Post of the American Legion was named in his honor.

BENJAMIN PLINY BRADFORD, '17

BENJAMIN P. BRADFORD, 1st Lieutenant, U. S. A., was born in Wayne, Maine, on March 24, 1893. His early life was spent on the farm of his parents, where he laid the foundation of his honest and rugged character and splendid physique, which were later to endear him to all his friends and gain for him early recognition on the athletic field. He fitted for Bowdoin at Kents Hill Seminary, graduated in 1913, and the same fall matriculated at Bowdoin, where he immediately achieved prominence on the football and baseball teams, engaging in both sports each year of his college career. He stood well in his studies, made friends readily and stood by them.

When the country entered the War he at once enrolled in the Officers' Training Corps at the college. Favoring the aviation branch of the service, he entered the Signal Corps at Cambridge, Massachusetts, on August 14, 1917, receiving his ground-school training at Massachusetts Institute of Technology. Leaving there as a Second Lieutenant, he was assigned to the Rainbow Division and was commissioned 1st Lieutenant on May 13, 1918. His first assignment to active duty as a flyer in France was on June 1, 1918. For some months he received additional training as a combat flyer at Tours. Tragically, his career as a flyer was cut short by his untimely death on August 6, 1918, at Tours, when the antiquated plane he was flying behind the lines crashed. Like so many other American flyers, he met his death before an opportunity to meet the enemy had been presented. He now sleeps in the American Cemetery at Tours.

Ben Bradford was a most lovable fellow. The outstanding honesty of his character, coupled with his devotion to his friends, endeared him to all, and marked him as one of the best known members of 1917, — the War Class. To a native happiness of disposition there was added a drollness of phrase which ever maintained and strengthened the morale of the athletic teams and enlivened many a college social group. His philosophy of life was simple: he did the day's work cheerfully and faithfully. He loved life, yet went out to the War boldly and eagerly. He was a worthy son of Bowdoin and true to her best traditions.

FRANK DURHAM HAZELTINE, n '17

FRANK DURHAM HAZELTINE was born in Seattle, Washington, on December 22, 1894. He was the son of Ben and Annie (Durham) Hazeltine of Belfast, Maine, and a grandson of Charles B. Hazeltine. After graduating from the Yeates School, Lancaster, Pennsylvania, he matriculated at Bowdoin College and was a Senior there when he entered the First Officers' Training Camp at Plattsburg, New York. Here he received his lieutenant's commission in August, 1917, and was soon ordered to active duty with the 101st Infantry, 26th Division of New England.

Sailing from Hoboken the night of September 7, 1917, Lieutenant Hazeltine with the 1st Battalion of the 101st Infantry landed at St. Nazaire, France, on September 21. After a brief rest at this port, the regiment moved inland to Neufchâteau, and settled down for its long training in the science of modern warfare under the able instruction of the 162d Infantry of the French Army. At the end of four months of arduous and monotonous schooling, everyone was genuinely delighted when, in February, the division went to the Chemin-des-Dames for a taste of the real thing.

At that time the Chemin-des-Dames was a quiet sector, but after a month and a half of patrolling, digging trenches, stringing barbed wire, and the routine of occupying an organized trench system under actual war conditions, the division became a smoothly functioning unit of solid strength.

Late in March the division shifted to the Toul Sector, relieving the 1st Division. Shortly after this, Lieutenant Hazeltine with several other officers was ordered to the 32d Division in the Champlitte Area to act as instructor in rifle and hand grenades. He was there a month, returning to his own regiment the middle of May. Frank was with it, however, only a fortnight when he was selected to attend a five weeks' course of instruction at the 1st Corps School in Gondrecourt. Coming back to his unit the last part of June, he found it already preparing to move westward again, to relieve the 2d Division, which was holding the sector from Belleau Woods to the town of Vaux.

During the night of July 8 and 9 the 101st relieved the 9th Infantry in Vaux and along the railroad embankment of the Paris-Metz Line. Here, at the tip of the Soissons-Château-Thierry-Rheims salient, the activity of both sides was acutely realized.

The final desperate thrust of the Germans came the night of July 15 and 16. It was centered toward Dormans, but the right flank of the attack fell against the 101st Infantry in Vaux. The enemy artillery saturated the town and the woods immediately to the rear with mustard gas. It was raining heavily that night; the woods were a thick black, spotted intermittently with the quick flashes of the bursting shells. During the shelling, Lieutenant Hazeltine groped through the lethal darkness, assembled his platoon, and led it from the woods to an open field which was free of the poisonous gas. Toward dawn the rain stopped, the attack subsided, then the sun's coming warmed the earth, and the penetrating fumes of the gas were drawn from the steeped woods.

The mustard gas had taken its toll, however; there were many severely burned who had to be evacuated. Lieutenant Hazeltine, his face a glistening and streaming red, his body sorely burned in several places, was forced to go to the field hospital and from there was sent to the base hospital at Châteauroux.

About the second of September he was again with the regiment, wholly recovered from his burns, ready and quietly eager to resume command of his platoon.

On the night of September 7, the anniversary of his sailing for France, Lieutenant Hazeltine led his platoon into the trenches just northeast of Mouilly, relieving two sections of the French infantry. Tranquil as this sector then was, there was a tense repression in the air and among the men which bespoke eloquently of the unknown soon to be adventured in the attack on the St. Mihiel Salient.

At one o'clock on the morning of the 12th, the single bark of a gun announced the beginning. Soon the night was a crashing roar, pierced by the overhead shrieking of the shells. At eight o'clock the troops scrambled out of their trenches and advanced into the welter of an indiscriminate death. There, at the height of the attack, with victory assured, amid the pitted waste of a tortured soil, Lieutenant Hazeltine with two of his men was swept into eternity by a dense rain of hissing machine-gun bullets.

The long trail of this son of Bowdoin went six thousand miles from Seattle, Washington, to a little white cross in the consecrated ground of the American Cemetery at Thiaucourt in the department of Meurthe et Moselle, France.

In the last year of his life, Frank Hazeltine displayed qualities of unwavering courage, genial kindness, and staunch loyalty which commanded the respect of his fellow officers and the love of his men. In him the spirit of adventurous youth was tempered by a sound intelligence and ennobled by a fine idealism. But his most striking, most real, and most lovable attribute was his soul, which transcended all the ghastly shambles and flaming inferno of war, which shone from his eyes, which emanated from his very being, creating in his presence a sanctuary from the insistent clamor of strife.

So also, the most inspiring, if the most impalpable, asset of a college is its soul nourished by the individual accomplishment, nobility, and sacrifice of those who have passed through its gates. Among the names of Bowdoin men who have contributed in the highest degree to the soul of their alma mater is that of Frank Durham Hazeltine. His career was climaxed by envious accomplishment and graceful nobility; his death was that of Christlike sacrifice.

JUDSON GORDON MARTELL, n '17

JUDSON GORDON MARTELL, the son of Edward Albro and Mary Ann (Mackay) Martell, was born October 14, 1895. He fitted for college at the Somerville, Massachusetts, High School. He entered Bowdoin College in the fall of 1913, where he remained for two years, and then left college for a while to earn money, with the intention of returning later to complete his college course.

In July, 1917, he took the competitive examinations for the Regular Army, and in November, 1917, received the commission of 2d Lieutenant. He was first assigned to the Officers' Training Barracks at Fort Leavenworth, Kansas, where he was stationed for three months. About the first of April, 1918, he sailed for France and was assigned to Company E, 2d Battalion, 60th Infantry. Later he was commissioned 1st Lieutenant and was Acting Captain when killed in action near Cunel, France, on October 14, 1918.

He was awarded, posthumously, the Distinguished Service Cross, which was presented to his mother on Boston Common by Major General Clarence R. Edwards on May 20, 1919.

In the words of the citation, "although severely wounded he continued to direct his command under heavy machine-gun and sniping fire and maintained his organization under demoralizing influence until killed by a sniper's bullet."

Major Jeffrey E. Baldwin of the 60th Infantry, in which

THE DEAD

Lieutenant Martell served, in a letter to his mother writes of the bravery of the young officer and of the modesty with which he accepted the honors after he learned that he had been cited for conspicuous gallantry.

Lieutenant Martell's letters evidence his strong attachment to his college and its officials, to whom he turned for advice in connection with his prospective war service.

May, 1917, he wrote the Dean: "Bowdoin has been making a fine showing in the present emergency and I am more and more proud of her; more and more determined to go back if I ever return from wherever I am sent in the next year or so."

September, 1917, he wrote the President: "I have passed all examinations for provisional 2d Lieutenant in the Regular Army. I honestly would like to see service as soon as I can."

He never came back, but his gold star on the college flag is the symbol of a life and death true to Bowdoin's highest traditions.

FORBES RICKARD, JR., '17

"I doubt if in the long history of the college there has ever been a class poem equal in beauty and pathos to that delivered here by Rickard, June 21, 1917." So wrote President Sills in review of the volume of undergraduate verse and prose by Forbes Rickard which appeared from the Mosher Press in 1919.

That poem, delivered to a thin war-stricken gathering at the morning exercises in Memorial Hall, later gained much publicity, not only because of the early death of the writer, but for its own meritorious expression of youth's exalted consecration to the great struggle. In "April, 1917," a sonnet written in days when the spring beauty without "made all things lovely easy to believe," he had already decided "to strike at wrong and hope for right." The record of events in this short and truly glorious life is a brief one. Born February 13, 1896, in Denver, fitted for college at Williston Seminary, Easthampton, Massachusetts, he graduated from Bowdoin with Phi Beta Kappa honors in 1917 and as holder of the coveted Longfellow Scholarship for graduate study; but that study gave place to war training. In college he was interested in literary work, was an editor of the Quill, a member of Ibis Senior Society, winner of the Goodwin Prize for his commencement essay, and a member of Alpha Delta Phi. In athletics he did some good work in track. College and all connected with it he loved reverently and unreservedly, with the devotion of a shy but deeply idealistic nature.

In the spring of 1917 he joined the R. O. T. C. at Bowdoin and took part in the drill in May when the late President Hyde, at what was probably his last public appearance, received the colors for the college. There commanding was Captain Sherman White, who soon after died in France. After training at Plattsburg in the summer and fall of 1917, Forbes Rickard was commissioned 2d Lieutenant in November, soon joined Company B, 59th Infantry (U. S. Regulars), at Camp Greene, North Carolina, and in April was sent to Fort Sill, Oklahoma, for special training. By the middle of May, 1918, he was in France, and was sent to an Australian Corps School for work with the Lewis Gun. Later he became not only Billeting Officer for his battalion, but also Battalion Intelligence Officer for a time. From July 11 to 14 his regiment was in heavy fighting in support of the French in the Belleau Wood region, and after the forced marches of July 17 and 18 was met by "strong machine-gun and artillery resistance," according to a fellow officer. While reorganizing the shattered company, Rickard was mortally wounded and died a few hours later at an evacuation hospital (July 19, 1918). The testimony of comrades is uniformly glowing in praise of his courageous and self-sacrificing relations to his men in all their hard days together.

Interred first at Juilly, he now lies in the American Cemetery at Belleau Wood, near Château-Thierry, the scene of that terrific campaign. Indeed, from the hillside grave one can look across to the tiny hamlet of Gandelu, which has been identified by one survivor as the spot where he fell.

The memory of Forbes Rickard is an especially beautiful and abiding one to which talent and personality contributed. Slight as his literary work seems in quantity, immature, written in verse form now regarded as a passing mode, there is yet in it all a telling beauty and an insistent promise; and, as in his letters, there is a spirit of extraordinary elevation. That quality of high vision, indeed, most marked his life and thoughts and made him the vivid personality that still lives for those who loved him.

His significance in the lives of those others was well expressed in the poem on his death written at Saint-Amand (Cher) by his classmate and fraternity brother, Lieutenant Hal S. White, — verses included in President Thwing's book on the part of "American Youth in the War" as one of the best of the war poems.

THE LAST LINES OF RICKARD'S CLASS POEM

Deep-brooding pines, beneath whose aging peace
The sunlit faces flash, and turning go —
Remember us, who take a swift release
And in far lands defend the best we know;
Deserted halls, that echoed to the sound
Of these our voices seeking after truth —
Forget the carelessness you often found;
Remember still the striving of our youth
That mixes dream with laughter, songs with tears,
Pure gold with dross, and never will confess
The deepest of its loyalties and fears
Till suddenly it renders all — no less.

WILFRED OLIVIER BERNARD, '18

WILFRED OLIVIER BERNARD was born at Lewiston, Maine, October 21, 1894. He was of French stock, being the son of E. Olivier and Matilda (Marquis) Bernard. He studied for some time at a seminary in Quebec, and completed his work for college at the Edward Little High School, Auburn, Maine.

Bernard entered Bowdoin in the class of 1918, specializing in psychology and biology, in which he displayed marked ability. His college course was selected to coördinate with the study of medicine. He graduated Cum Laude.

He entered service in the Medical Reserve Corps and was detailed by the War Department to continue his course of study in the Medical Department of Bowdoin.

BOWDOIN IN THE WORLD WAR

He contracted pneumonia, following an attack of influenza, and died in the College Infirmary, December 17, 1918. Thus passed a fine character, a promising scholar.

Resolutions to his memory by his fraternity record that "he had already won the love and respect of all who knew him."

CARROLL EDWARD FULLER, n '18

CARROLL EDWARD FULLER was born at Portland, Maine, April 30, 1896. He was the son of Arthur V. and Olive Louise (Blanchard) Fuller. He fitted for college at Westbrook High School and entered Bowdoin in the class of 1918.

Fuller was a member of the Kappa Sigma Fraternity and is described by one who knew him intimately as an earnest chap of excellent character. At the end of his second year he left college to go into business. Shortly before entering the service he was married to Myrtle M. Eaton of Westbrook.

At Camp Devens Fuller was attached to an Infantry Regiment of the 12th Division. He died there of influenza on the 26th day of September, 1918, and was buried on the following Sunday at Evergreen Cemetery, Portland.

JOSEPH RALPH SANDFORD, '18

JOSEPH RALPH SANDFORD, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Almon F. Sandford, was born in Skowhegan, Maine, October 16, 1895.

He was educated in the public schools of Skowhegan, Maine, and in 1913 graduated from Skowhegan High School. After one year of post-graduate work in that institution he entered Bowdoin College in September, 1914.

In the summer of 1916 he was called with Company E, 2d Regiment, Maine Infantry, to the Mexican Border. On his return late in October he went back to college for his third year's work.

In March, 1917, he was again called into the service of his country. Later he received an appointment to enter Plattsburg Training Camp. While there he passed the test for aviation and was sent to Boston for further study. Later he, with five other honor men, was chosen for further training over seas. He sailed in August, 1917; landed in London and went directly to Oxford University, finally receiving a 1st Lieutenant's Commission at Ayre, Scotland. He was temporarily a member of the British Royal Flying Corps, 28th Squadron and 22d Wing. He was sent to the Western front, where after six weeks of active service he was killed in combat over the enemy line near Wambrechines, Northern France, April 12, 1918. He was buried in La Touraine Cemetery and after four years his body was brought home and buried in the family lot.

His work and life at Bowdoin were exemplary. His judgment and wisdom were always eagerly sought. He was loved and respected by professors and students alike. In fact, his life was characterized as one of supreme sacrifice, which with his sound logic, his gifts of expression, and his pleasing personality, have made his name one that will long be remembered by all who knew him.

ALBERT DAVIS HOLBROOK, '19

ALBERT DAVIS HOLBROOK was born in Rockland, Maine, January 26, 1896. His father was Frederick H. Holbrook, his mother Ceretha (Simonton) Holbrook. He fitted for college at the Rockland High School and entered Bowdoin in the class of 1919. He was Captain of the Sophomore football eleven. He was a member of the Second Maine Regiment, and joined this regiment when it was called into Federal Service at Augusta and from there went to Westfield, Massachusetts. There he was appointed to Plattsburg, holding the grade of corporal.

At Plattsburg he was commissioned 2d Lieutenant and assigned to the Regular Army, going into active service in France immediately. June 6, 1918, he was mortally wounded and taken prisoner at the battle of Château-Thierry. As he fell he exclaimed: "Fight to a finish, boys, I am through!" He died June 20 in a German Field Hospital at Fismes, France, and is buried in the Oise-Aisne Cemetery, Fery-en-Tardenois.

From excerpts of letters written at the front one learns of his attachment to his college, gauges his mettle and spirit and his high sense of responsibility.

"One year ago I was leading a care-free life as a college undergraduate at good old Bowdoin. Today I am in the American Army in France. The past year seems like a dream to me when I look back upon it, yet I most assuredly would not have it otherwise than as it is, even if I could. Germany must be defeated and I want to be one in the army which is surely going to bring this about. . . ."

"The two years I spent at Bowdoin were the happiest years of my life. . . . I have been assigned to the twenty-third infantry; nothing pleases me better, as it has always been my keenest desire to serve with the regular troops. I have a platoon of my own and it is a corker. In my platoon there are fifty-eight men, and you may imagine that I am rather busy looking after them. I have made it a rule never to send a man where I would not go myself. . . . I am twenty-two years old today; it does n't seem possible that I am such an old man. . . . I hope I have acquired the true army spirit, which is to do one's best in whatever capacity one may be placed. . . . I have just come out of the trenches after spending a very long time there, my platoon having been in the front lines. I have been out across No Man's Land several times and once through the German wire. Trench life is not so bad as sometimes pictured. Of course there is a nervous strain on the officers all the time."

From these letters, and from an incident related by an old sergeant we can readily see why his men had become deeply attached to him. As the sergeant tells it, they were on a long hike, the strain was so great that one or two of the men had weakened, and, "when I looked around I saw the kid Lieutenant taking over some of their baggage."

He was an honor to the college that he represented and to the uniform that he wore.

WILLIAM FRYE MARTIN, '19

WILLIAM FRYE MARTIN was born in Medford, Massachusetts, on June 26, 1896. His father was William Pierce Martin, of the class of 1880, and his mother was Jane Hammond. His family moved to Lexington, Massachusetts, in 1902, and it was in the public schools of this town that he fitted for college.

THE DEAD

He entered Bowdoin in the fall of 1915. Early in 1917, in the middle of his Junior year, he enrolled in the American Ambulance Corps, for service in France.

The menacing submarine situation delayed his sailing on the second of March, as he had planned. The entry of the United States into the war appearing certain, he enlisted April 5, 1917, at Bath, Maine, in the United States Naval Reserve Force, with the rating of seaman. He was stationed at the Navy Yard at Portsmouth, and later at Bumkin Island, Boston Harbor, until fall, when, being under twenty-one years of age, he was sent back to college on the inactive list. Early in the winter of 1918 he secured his discharge from the navy and attempted to enlist in the Aviation Corps, but failed to pass the physical examinations.

In March, 1918, he enlisted in a Regular Army Hospital Unit at Portland, Maine, and was stationed at U. S. Base Hospital No. 9, Lakewood, New Jersey. Here he contracted scarlet fever.

July 26, 1918, he sailed for France, and was attached to the 18th Regiment, U. S. Infantry, 1st Division. On October 9, 1918, at Hill No. 240, near Exermont, in the Argonne Forest, he was killed in action.

Young Martin was a descendant of the Hon. William P. Frye, Bowdoin, '50, who represented Maine for many years with eminent distinction in the United States Senate.

He was exceedingly fond of athletics and had been manager of his class football team in his Freshman year, and of his class track team in his Sophomore year.

His war record evidences the kind of blood that ran in his veins, — his determination to serve his country at the front in one capacity when age and physical requirements barred him from serving in another. He was the master of his own fate, the captain of his own soul.

FRANCIS YVONNETT VAN SCHOONHOVEN, n '19

FRANCIS YVONNETT VAN SCHOONHOVEN was born in the city of Troy, New York, on the 15th day of May, 1895. He was the son of Francis Yvonnelt and Kate (Howe) Van Schoonhoven.

He fitted for college at the Hoosac School, Hoosac, New York, and entered Princeton University in the class of 1917, transferring to Bowdoin in 1915.

Previous to entering Bowdoin he had trained at two of the Plattsburg, New York, training camps and had served through the Mexican Border Campaign as a private in Company A, 2d New York Infantry. Upon the entry of the United States into the World War he again entered a military training camp for officers, this time at Fort Niagara, and at the close of this camp was granted a commission as 2d Lieutenant in the Regular Army, unattached.

Lieutenant Van Schoonhoven sailed for France early in January, 1918, and soon after his arrival was assigned as 2d Lieutenant, Company D, 101st U. S. Infantry, 26th (YD) Division. This regiment had already seen service in the front lines when Lieutenant Van Schoonhoven joined it. He was in action with his regiment in the capture of Château-Thierry, and again at St. Mihiel, in September, when he was cited for bravery. For the skillful way in which he handled his men in this action he was promoted to the rank of 1st Lieutenant.

He was in the fighting about Soissons.

On October 26 or 27, in the closing drive of the War, he was killed in action by machine-gun fire, together with eight of his men, northeast of Verdun. He was buried where he fell with his eight men, and his grave is marked by the usual cross and insignia.

Lieutenant Van Schoonhoven was one of three brothers, all of whom fought for America on the fields of France from early in the War, but in separate divisions, so that they never met during their foreign service.

As a student he had an excellent record and was a young man of unusual promise and ability. The letters which he wrote after he had gone to France showed a most intelligent and understanding grasp of the whole situation in the Great War.

LAWRENCE HILL CATE, '20

LAWRENCE HILL CATE, son of Frederick and Joanna (Lane) Cate, of Weymouth, Massachusetts, was born in Weymouth, April 19, 1896. He graduated from Thayer Academy, Braintree, Massachusetts, in 1916, and was there captain of the baseball team. He entered Bowdoin College with the class of 1920. At Bowdoin he played baseball, and was a member of Zeta Psi Fraternity. He trained with the Harvard R. O. T. C. for three months and enlisted in Boston in July, 1917, in the Naval Aviation Service. After a ground course at Massachusetts Institute of Technology, he was sent to Hampton Roads, Virginia, and thence to Pensacola, Florida. He was commissioned Ensign in the Naval Reserve Flying Corps on March 11, 1918, and had been recommended for Junior Lieutenant at the time of his death. He died of pneumonia following influenza on October 9, 1918, at Pensacola.

His Squadron Commander wrote of him:

"A good aviator, conservative flyer with a cool head. Rather young in appearance but above the average in brains, industry, and reliability. He has a very pleasant personality. He is a conscientious worker."

In the official report it was stated:

"For some time he was a flight instructor in an N 9 Squadron, teaching elementary flying. He was taken from this duty to be made an Assistant Division Commander in a division of flying boats, and soon became a Division Commander in the F boat squadron. From this duty he was promoted to Assistant Patrol Officer, and later to the position of Patrol Officer, which he held at the time of his death. As Patrol Officer he had full charge of all navigation training flights out into the Gulf and of all rescue work in connection with these flights. He was also in charge of all ground instruction in navigation. His status was commensurate with that of a Senior Squadron Commander. His classification as to type of pilot was 'HS Pilot.' In official files of the School . . . a confidential report from the Commander of Squadron V. contains the comment 'a fine officer'."

Another Squadron Commander wrote of him:

"I feel that I knew Lawrence well, personally, and can say without hesitation or reservation that he was one of the most liked and admired officers of the Seaplane School."

MICHAEL JOSEPH DELEHANTY, '20

MICHAEL JOSEPH DELEHANTY was born in Boston, January 17, 1896, the son of Michael Joseph and Nellie (Phelan) Delehanty. He prepared for college at the English High School and at Huntington Preparatory School and entered Bowdoin, with special standing, in the class of 1920.

He took an active part in athletics at the high and preparatory schools and his excellent playing on the Bowdoin Varsity baseball team won him the coveted "B." He was a member of Beta Theta Pi Fraternity. It was while attending Bowdoin that he entered the service. Young Delehanty was rejected at the first Plattsburg Training Camp because of his youth, but was commissioned Ensign in the naval reserves March 8, 1917, after taking the aviation course at Massachusetts Institute of Technology. In December, 1917, he was assigned to the Pensacola Naval Station, Florida.

Ensign Delehanty and Ensign Thomas W. Draper of Brighton, Maryland, were killed in an accident, March 25, 1918, when their machine fell into the water from an altitude of about five hundred feet. Ensign Delehanty was the first undergraduate to lose his life in the World War. The announcement of his death was deeply felt at the college, where he was one of the popular athletes. A military funeral, at which the college was represented, was held April 3, at St. Joseph's Church, West End, Boston, and the burial was in St. Joseph's Cemetery, West Roxbury.

SAMUEL GARNONS BUSH, '22

SAMUEL GARNONS BUSH was born in the town of Montclair, New Jersey, on September 12, 1898. He was the seventh in a family of eight children. His father was Roswell Davis Bush, his mother, Emma Jane (Potts) Bush.

After some schooling in Montclair, New Jersey, he went to the Good Will Schools in Maine, in September, 1911. He graduated from the high school there in 1918. Undoubtedly his excellent training at Good Will and the love and reverence in which he held his matron, Mrs. Ella G. Thurston, helped to bring out the best in him. Very early he showed an appreciation of the finer things of life, and this attribute seemed to be the outstanding characteristic of his career.

After graduating from Good Will High School he entered Bowdoin College in the fall of 1918. He was a member of Kappa Chapter of Psi Upsilon Fraternity.

Although Sam had been in hospitals all summer and had undergone two major operations, his spirit to carry on is well illustrated by the fact that he enlisted in the Bowdoin S. A. T. C., in September of 1918. His record in the Student Army Training Corps, although short, was exceedingly creditable. Shortly after enlistment he was transferred to Fort Preble, Portland, Maine. His long illness during the previous summer had made him an easy victim of influenza and pneumonia, of which he died December 23, 1918, in the college infirmary in Brunswick.

On the day after Christmas he was buried in his soldier's uniform with appropriate ceremonies in Bloomfield, New Jersey, beside a brother who had died in the service and by whose grave Sam had stood and sorrowed only two short months before.

The president of the college and members of Sam's fraternity spoke of him as a good student, of fine principles; a splendid example of perseverance, loyalty, and steadfastness of purpose.

Seeking the finer things, Sam had learned to face his world with a smile.

Montclair has erected a magnificent monument to her sons, and on the Honor Roll of this shaft is engraved, with others, the name of Samuel Garnons Bush.

WYVERN ALMON COOMBS, Med. '13

WYVERN A. COOMBS was born at West Deer Isle, October 10, 1890. He was the son of Tyler M. and Cora L. (Lawry) Coombs. The family moved to Vinalhaven the next year. He graduated from the Vinalhaven High School in 1909 and from the Medical Department of Bowdoin College in 1913.

BOWDOIN IN THE WORLD WAR

He served as a voluntary interne in the Boston City Hospital, and subsequently as House Doctor in the Central Maine General Hospital at Lewiston.

The efficiency with which he discharged his duties brought him a call a year later as Assistant Interne at the Boston Floating Hospital. An exceptionally promising opening at Westbrook, Maine, led him to settle in that city, New Year's Day, 1915. His medical skill and his attractive personality soon brought him a large practice. The future looked very bright to this young physician; but when the United States went to war the path of duty lay clear before him. He promptly entered the service of the Regular Army. He had gained practical knowledge of military surgery as a 1st Lieutenant in the Maine National Guard. He had served as Examining Surgeon in western Maine for the Milliken Regiment. Early in December, 1917, he was assigned to field hospital work, with the rank of 1st Lieutenant with the Medical Reserve Corps; he was stationed at Fort Oglethorpe, Georgia. Everywhere he performed his duties in a manner which merited high praise from his superior officers.

While mounted and in the discharge of his duties in connection with Field Hospital No. 14, on April 20, 1918, he was mortally injured by the fall of his horse. He was removed to the general hospital, where he died three days later without regaining consciousness.

Lieutenant Coombs was a young man of exceptionally fine character, a clean-living American officer. His example had its wholesome influence in both civil and military life. His father and his two sisters, Mrs. Sidney L. Winslow, of Rockland, and Miss Anna C. Coombs, were his nearest relatives.
